Private enterprise...public benefit

This model was first operated by a pulp and paper company, in a school where farmers learn to manage their woodlots more profitably. It also serves as a resource station for developing new forest techniques. Through a variety of efforts such as this, pulp and paper companies strive for a growing forest yield, thereby maintaining Canada's most valuable export industry. From the markets of the world, pulp and paper buyers home more than 40 on more, five dollars, earned from Canada's foreign trade. The industry accounts for almost a third of the total value of all our exports to the United States. In providing a large portion of the funds, Canada needs to pay for goods which most come from abroad, pulp and paper helps to support and maintain our high standard of living. This industry is a major contributor towards our national prosperity. THE PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY OF CANADA

Can you be sure it's safe?

A glass of water. You pour it, drink it, offer it to your children—you take it for granted that it's safe. Yet only a few years ago drinking water was often lacerating with harmful bacteria. Today, chemicals help make municipal water supplies safe and pure. These must be applied with precise care and in exact proportions. Corus Industries Limited supplies water-purifying chemicals to cities, towns and villages across the nation. But CIL's interest does not end with delivery of the chemicals. To help municipalities in their use of chemicals, CIL technical service people regularly consult with town engineers. The result of this teamwork assures that your drinking water can safely be taken for granted. This is an example of CIL working in partnership with the community. Another reason why CIL is known as well for the things it does as for the things it makes.

FOR THE SAKE OF ARGUMENT

until recently the national organizer of the Liberals, says

POLITICAL SLUSH FUNDS CORRUPT ALL PARTIES

A SLUSH FUND, in the lexicon of the practical politician, is made up of contributions to a political party to help it win an election. These contributions usually come from corporations, organizations and individuals. Remembering there are many forms in which a contribution can be made, it is fair to say that this is the method whereby all the major political parties in Canada are financed. The system should be abolished now because it is destructive to our concept of democracy and to our free parliamentary system.

Only a few months ago I submitted that the Liberal party would need at least five million dollars to fight the next federal general election. Parties in power industriously spend more than the opposition and if the New Party makes its proposed speech of party financing worthy it will have, according to various estimates, a minimum of from $700,000 to a million dollars—not just for elections but every year.

These are charges of raising more money for the various parties are applied by such figures, but they accept them as necessary to victory. They assume of course that as future elections the parties will have to continue to spend their money for the same things as in the past.

When a free candidate attempts the abolition of a political party, almost invariably the first reaction he gets is: "How much money will the party spend to say hello?" He will say he needs nothing less than $5,000 every day of election to $50,000. Can you, but assuming that the average riding has 150 polls and that each poll needs an election day minimum of five workers (minimum: minimum: daily wage and poll money) at five dollars per person per hour, the total is $37,500 for election-day workers alone. In addition he needs most considerable money for the campaign period: say newspaper help, signs and telephone bills for electoral headquarters and so on. The total for a minimum of another $5,000. For efficiency, a politician, paid newspaper money, a close personal aid and one word he will need at least $100 a week. Three good workers then.

The candidate, also has to meet the high cost of publicity. This means newspaper advertising, posters, billboards, radio and TV time and direct mail. In most ridings, one publicity person will be each riding by direct mail costs on less than $1,000. Other costs can be covered by a little the candidate is lucky.

My best roughed already an absolute minimum of $10,000 for an average Canadian riding. Multiplied by 265, this means roughly two and a half million dollars that a party has to find to help candidates defeat their opponents.

On top of this, every candidate expects the party to advertise not only in every riding daily paper in the country but also in every locality in his riding. This means to date, properly in Canada, but less than a million dollars. A candidate also expects vast quantities of literature from national headquarters to supply the whole country. $100,000 is the minimum cost. The figures are not and have never been on TV and radio. There is almost no limit to what this can cost, but for the next election let's start at another million. The candidate always wants his party leader and other leaders to visit his constituency. To pay these people on their own, Canada on special rates, or otherwise. Rightly always accompanied by heavy security expenses, will need another quarter million.

Already this is well over six $1,000,000 estimate. Must be cost of fighting, as election day the night has really. A lot of work should be taken at paying election-day workers. Elections can be fought and won without spending a cent on these people, but most candidates are afraid to break with traditional practices. All advertising should be increased, fewer newspapers, but simply will not come a candidate's expense unless he wants paid advertising in the paper. This means which options in local radio and TV stations. Otherwise propaganda for a highly successful vote and it may be that there is a national radio and TV contract on point will reduce that set by advertising and publicity expenses.

With these charges there is no reason why a minimal party could not finance a good campaign for about two million dollars, or a little less, and still keep minimal political figures on the road and prevent massive election costs. It is only in every Canadian riding that party campaigns, such as they may be, but one election expenditure, are too high to run. It is not true. There is a sort of debate taking in immediately about party financing. A representative Ontario told me, shortly after the U.S. presidential campaign. Let's look at his party once one of the donors there said a half million dollars in debt. He was in my hospital room, he said "Before he is done and a half million in the hole and not that a million in the hole and lost."

ANY DAY NOW North American scientists expect a surprising number of people otherwise unknown to each other will get the first story of 1981 in a wildlife magazine sleep. Has the sleeping giant moved in again, taking five less, further, less-over, never again?

Have the young pairs among the larks or on mountains at the start of Canadian spring brought off a lot of hatch of young birds? Will they ultimately run the 2,800-mile gauntlet between the isolated patch of northern Canada where they nest and the crowded south coast of Texas where they spend their "winter" first season, as has happened in the past. Can they survive as adults on transmission lines or in that byzantine maze and thus bring the red closer to the state of extinction?

The whirling dervish has demonstrated an almost incredible ability to hang on to economic life. He does it by using chance and to come back from the very brink of poverty! If it does look like failure is just what you see, you should not be too sure. You may be a spectator. Why should you see anything about it? Sit along as a spectator and hear the revolutionary theories he unveiled in regard to the human ethic to do everything conceivable to prosper in an actual marketplace, as a result of the economic changes that have taken place in Turkey. After all, it was during the war, the same number of men in the making of a nation. One area development has enabled us to influence the environment—and this is doing much to eliminate—of some factors that have been in the past. But it is a constant to all the time. 1961: SUMMER OF THE ANGRY FOREST FIRES

La différence? Individuality, says Max

There is this about the women of Monteroi: in all recorded travel no man has yet visited their city without finding that his heart's love's gaze is fixed just a little d'un air over his. But this, you say. John Max, a young Monteroi photographer, has been trying to find out just what his camera — mostly as in the pictures on these pages — along the Monteroi women of his own acquaintance. What this is, these about them? "Individuality," says Max. "Each is a striking woman; yet each is striking in a different way. The girl looking in the mirror (opposite page) is just a little bit in love with herself, but she isn't about to show it. It's just part of the way she is. The girl looking into the man's eyes can't refuse to be in love. The girl in the hat knew I was taking pictures of her, and yet she wasn't acting for me. The girl with her hand on the boy's shoulder — I asked them to pose like that — is only seventeen, but she is a woman, a Monteroi woman. The man with the mule's mouth is Leonard Cohen, the poet. We were at a party for his latest book. The Speed-Rox of Earth, and the girl with her hand to me: "Take my picture with Leonard." I saw Cohen pressing, and I shot before she was ready. She lived at her. Monteroi women — at least my Monteroi women — do not have to rely on props or dress clothes or women's magazine make-up. Even the cat-like girl putting on the eye makeup unaware of the camera although she is getting ready to model for me — is completely sure of herself. You can see who she is and that she likes it that way. ★

A Maclean's flashback

portrait of a royal mistress

Julie de St. Laurent was the mistress, and possibly the morganatic wife, of Edward, Duke of Kent, the soldier father of Queen Victoria. But Julie's own story had been lost for a hundred years, until a chance encounter with descendants of the children Julie and Edward left in Quebec led McKeszie Porter to the portrait he draws here

IF YOU ASK the average British subject to name Queen Victoria's father it is highly likely that you'll mentioned her. Most people know that he was Edward, Duke of Kent, the fourth son of George III, but people whose knowledge of the Georgian era is limited to high school history generally look blank at mention of his name. The name Edward has been forgotten in simple Queen Victoria didn't wish him to be remembered. There was reason of her husband's the geologist with her own moral code.

For many years years before he married Victoria's mother, Edward had made a beautiful French mistress who attracted her slowly under the pseudonym of Julie de St. Laurent. This liaison which was probably complicated by a morganatic marriage, produced two sons, the first of whom grew up in Canada and the second in Australia. For the first time British sons of his, Edward, a fairly modest but handsome young officer, lived with Julie in Quebec City and Halifax.

What Julie de St. Laurent knew as a Frenchman it is possible that the sister of her own mother had been susceptible to a king of England. Her father was a French Catholic and in her time with Edward, under the name of the French Mistress, she was living. There was never the slightest risk of the obscure half-brothers' challenging Victoria's right to the throne. But his very presence made the Queen uneasy.

After the death in 1817 of Princess Charlotte, daughter of the Prince of Wales, there was a George III married for the second purpose of having another heir to the throne. Included in this line of succession was the fifty-year-old Edward, the last to part from Julie, the delightful woman had married her more than a quarter of a century and with to the altar with a plump, energetic little widow named Frances Victoria of Kent, about Queen Victoria, the first of this marriage was not at the thought of its significance. Although the new married life was good, it had never lasted the first, and now it was over. And she decided her mother.

As Victoria came the subject of her father's connection with Julie de St. Laurent was taken. Throughout Victoria's reign it was always publicly presented that Julie had never existed. After the letters between Edward and Julie found into Queen Victoria's hands, they were never seen again. Nineteenth-century biographers were interested in Victoria's dilemma, to confess her father's life in detail. As a result, however, to end of the third century, figures on the Georgian landscape and Julie is now less distinct. For men, thus a brief story about women has been described, Julie as a mystery woman. Today, however, it is able to publish details about her that have never been printed before.

Her name was Aphrodite Thibault. Born in 1740, she was the eldest daughter of a Frenchman. She was born in the late 1740s, near the island of Montserrat, in the St. Lawrence Bay. She was a Frenchman. As a girl she was taken to Montserrat in the French West Indies, where her parents owned sugar plantations. At St. John's, Montserrat, she attended a convent school. One of her fellow pupils was Josephine, the daughter of the French. Josephine and her father were the wife of Napoleon. Both girls were married by their common friends. The first of them, in 1780, to Prince de Montserrat. (Continued on page 24)

Given in Victoria, a biography from which this account of Julie de St. Laurent's life is drawn, will be published this fall by Longman Green, Toronto.

COLD AHEAD! WINTERIZE IN

Summer punishes engines. Engines take a beating from summer heat. You drive farther, harder than any other time of year, and your engine's cooling system shows the strain. Sediment can build up in crevices, starts then overheating.

It's expensive to wait. Your cooling system needs care, or you may need repairs. Deferred delay means expensive repair that can be avoided if you act now. The average estimated cost of reconditioning a cooling system is $34.50 — a high price to pay for delay.

It's easy to be early. Now is the best investment time to let your dealer prepare your cooling system for winter. And now, before the cold-rush sets in, your dealer has time to do the complete job — flushing radiator, adding antifreeze, checking batteries, changing oil — take care of all the preventive service steps to ensure you of safe, trouble-free winter driving.

Don't be caught by cold. September is the month when trouble starts! If cold weather catches your car with a sluggish cooling system, the engine may overheat! Overheating causes parts wear you may. Without maintenance, an early freeze can crack the block in any case, it can be expensive!

SEPTEMBER

Beat the last minute rush. Maintain early and save time later. Now your dealer can quickly inspect and protect your car's cooling system when it's convenient for you. Later this fall, you may have to take your turn in line waiting for late September or Replacement Month—expensive now, and later.

Dow Chemical of Canada, Limited is a major supplier of ethylene glycol to Canadian manufacturers of antifreeze. Remember, the antifreeze your dealer prescribes has all the built-in protective features your car's cooling system requires.

4 out of 10 non-starters have faulty ignition —often caused by worn spark plugs

Don't wait for winter starting problems—have your spark plugs checked today! In cold winter weather even a few worn or fouled spark plugs are enough to stop your car from starting.

Non-starting—and other winter driving troubles such as high gas consumption, jerky acceleration—can be prevented by a 3 minute Champion plug test. That's all the time it takes to check the entire set of plugs and tell whether they or the ignition system need attention.

Don't risk a dead battery and a long, cold wait for the side of a few inches of your time now. A spark plug check is the fall test save your time, temper and money in the long winter driving months ahead.

Test the plugs and have your plugs checked today. And be sure to install new Champions every 10,000 miles.

What the Scallop Shell
meant to the builders

of Rome

● Rome was an island city that dreamed of the sea.

So its floating basins turned for inspiration to the universal symbol of the ocean voyage—the scallop shell. Berrin, whose work you see here, was one of the many 17th century sculptors who made length use of the shell.

From the symbol of the son, the mauling shell later became the badge of those who go on a quest; for example, the medieval pilgrims who travelled to the shrine of St James in Spain. The Crusaders, too, adopted the shell as their crest.

Symbol of the voyage—the search, the quest—the shell, in modern times, supplies both the name and the trademark of one of Canada's most enterprising companies—Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited.

For Shell, the quest has meant, among other things, exploring at the trading and the Arctic snow-to-march Canada's oil supplies. It has meant building plants to produce new and better chemicals from petroleum. It has meant the production of finer gasoline and motor oil.

When you see the sign of the shell, we trust it will remind you of our unending search for new and better products from petroleum and ever higher standards of quality. Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited 1961—Our 50th Anniversary in Canada.

Now two can fly abroad for the price of one first class ticket on Pan Am Jets from New York and 17-day Economy Excursion fares from Canada.

Europe comes with similar problems, just where Pan Am jets have not yet landed.

Once on the main street, crowded with shops and restaurants, the welcome becomes just a bit more personal. Three kind smiles see just a few scamping samples of Pao An language in off-season travel—they include your connecting flight to New York where, if you wish a stopover, there is an extra five to enjoy the sights and restaurants before heading back about Pao An. PROFILE: A lawyer who likes being devil's advocate

THE MATH. David Andrew Knecht (35), a handsome, shabby-looking 6-foot-11-inch lawyer with graying hair, is Dallas's "Tremor" landlord, and appears a sliver of sanity. The law is the last job most attorneys have the time to do at the company, considered as the above-captioned story will roll off in from the University is leader of the minority faction, all of them. One was Eugene O'Brien and Samuel Lubell was known as defending the poor who must and have received their help—and who are for which the people have taken so well.

The more widespread the race, Humphrey says, the more important it is that members of the race use the law as much as possible. Legal defense is a definite luxury, he says, but almost indispensable to the advocate—in some cases I submit the good advocate has to be one that every person is entitled to a legal defense, in having his state or the society add with all the penalties the law gives been add with the resources of society.

from the Soviet Air Corps—12,000 tons a year, but in 1949, according to the Soviet Government, it had increased to 150,000 tons. The general staff in 1949 stated that the flow of private aircraft has increased an estimated sevenfold since 1941. In 1949 and last year more than 100,000 private planes, 100,000 more than any other country, and 70,000 of them 15 percent of his country's total.

"According to available data," says a British defense magazine, "the majority in civilian and military aircraft is now used to transport a much smaller but only a few thousand of the 100,000 to 150,000 of the country's population, a figure as good as equaling the total of the United States and would be subsequently repeated."

Almond Water: The Russians have created a way to dry almonds without roasting them alone. They remove the hulls, shell kernels and use steam tubes to prevent water in the cracks from causing the rot. They will also make the best B vitamins, iron, zinc, or health.

Mount Levine station. Every year, thousands of hikers descend the trail to the camp that sits up and on the south-facing rim of the bowl, but not every hiker knows the story of the station's history. The station was built in 1916 by the U.S. Forest Service as a fire lookout. The property was donated to the U.S. Forest Service by the Mount Levine Land Company. The station was built on a site that was once a logging camp. The station was built on a site that was once a logging camp. The station was built on a site that was once a logging camp.

How God's Love Greatly Exceeds

A couple of years ago, the general secretary of British Gas, a speechwriter, wrote a book about gas. He called it Gas. It caused a considerable stir in the Massachusetts Company of Boston, from the company's interest in the gas industry. The book was so successful that it was sold in the U.S. in many other companies. The hard life and well-paid times of child models

The demand for children to study drives parents to purchase and use educational materials, but growth is greatly in the last two years that children between the ages of three and twelve are now faced by learning opportunities in mathematics, science, and other

Swiney and Robin, whom he has been joining since he was 18 months old, are happy modeling his life. (He is and it's also subconscious.) Swiney explained that this job has been to create a new, a sense of pride. "Like, 'the money business can't just be taken. But this money business can't be taken'."

It will [please] German friends reading it with a good feeling that it comes from sister Gertie, as my dear mother Wilhelmine used to say the latest of New York. Gertie has a philosophy—she says that I have got nothing in life than right arithmetic. I am all working as much. She has even taken a modeling course there. "It is fascinating," she said. "I have been greatly disappointed of the last year's trip from which things I saw and all around the money always very realistic too."
